

Master of International Studies 2020 and 2021
Students and Dissertation Titles

Anahera Acheson, Reclaiming the Future: Indigenous resurgence as a pathway to achieving sustainable self-determination

Olivia Barber, Towards a New Age of Financial Democracy: The Small-Time Investors, Technology, and Markets

Jesse Bawi, China And ASEAN in the South China Sea through the lens of Constructivism

Micheal Brook, Question: How has China maintained peace in the Korean Peninsula in the Post-Cold war era?

Joseph Demetriou, The Study of the role of social media in collective action: The case of Black Lives Matter

Bryn Donald, Trans-Tasman Approaches to a Global China: Divergence between Australia-New Zealand China policy

Adele Finnie, Do Leaders Matter? The theory of operational code in explaining foreign policy decision-making

Caitlin Harrison-Craig, NGOs, Local Communities and Water Scarcity in Israel/Palestine

Luke Hazelton, Small State Security, New Zealand, and the Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons

Stella Louise Hudson, The Realist Case for Enhancing the United States' National Interest Through Climate Change Mitigation: An assessment

Kaleb Jack, A Tale of Two Crises for New Zealand's Trade: How does COVID-19 compare to the Global Financial Crisis?

Tessa Joiner, Global health governance: Can the theories of Neo-liberal Institutionalism or Neo-Realism explain the WHO's responses to the 2003 SARS Epidemic and COVID-19 Pandemic?

Lewis McDonald, Can Guyana Avoid the Oil Curse and Ensure that Its Newfound Riches Benefit All Guyanese?

Josh Mackay, Russia's annexation of Crimea and the rules-based international order

Liam Miller, Hydro-politics in the Nile: A study of Sudan and Ethiopia

Fintan Morrison, Media coverage of the Panama Papers: A Critical Analysis

Kate Nally, International Human Rights, the Right to Education and the Experience of Girls in the Post-Cold War Era: An analysis of the cases of India and Pakistan

Niamh O'Donnell, United States Alliance Policy in East Asia: an examination of the offshore vs. onshore balancing debate

Tom Staite, Putin's Operation Code and Russia's Engagement in the 2016 US Presidential Election

Mouhannad Taha, The Game of Gains Over Syria: The role of the United Nations in the Syrian Crisis