Dunedin Retail Quarter Upgrade – George Street Design

Kurt Cole, senior landscape architect and urban designer at Jasmx

Dunedin's George Street is undergoing its first makeover in over a generation. The project responds to the need to replace ageing infrastructure, improve the area's appearance and safety record, and adapt to changes in the retail experience. The rearrangement to one-way southbound vehicular movement on George Street will optimise safety, accessibility, and amenity for everyone using the street.

The design of the street will celebrate Dunedin's rich multicultural heritage, with a particular focus on revealing its previously under-appreciated mana whenua history and cultural values. The layout of the street will reveal the Victorian architecture that lines the street while sharing the stories of early occupation and important cultural values through public art, new plantings, pavements and furniture.
