Policy for Participation in

Scenario-based Simulations

(and other simulation-based educational activities)

- 1. As part of your learning participants may be required to participate in scenario-based simulations (and other simulation-based activities such as procedural skills sessions).
- 2. Much of the educational value of this kind of activity resides in the fact that the learning is both active and reflective.
- 3. Participation in this kind of educational activity can however be stressful and this needs to be acknowledged and managed in a way such that it optimises rather than undermines learning
- 4. Additional stress may be felt if the session is being recorded (please see also the Policy Statement on the Recording of Activities at the UOC Simulation Centre).
- 5. Participants and staff are therefore required to be supportive and respectful of each other during these sessions.
- 6. Keeping the content of the sessions and the performance of individuals confidential within the group is expected. This serves the dual purposes of:
 - fostering a learning environment in which participants recognise the importance of acknowledging rather than hiding limitations and mistakes and feel safe prioritising learning;
 - preserving the learning value of the session for subsequent groups.
- 7. Participants will be expected not to discuss sessions outside of their groups and in particular to refrain from criticising or ridiculing the performance of their peers.
- 8. Staff will be expected to show the same respect to participants and be supportive and offer constructive feedback rather than criticism.
- 9. This does not preclude the sessions from being either challenging, or fun as well as educationally sound.
- 10. Any concerns about participating in these sessions generally or about a particular session should be raised directly with the lead tutor of the session or alternately with the Simulation Centre Director.
