

PRESENTS

Religion, the Media and the (Un)making of Prejudice towards New Zealand's Muslims

2016

"Our findings are important," says Associate Professor Bulbulia, "because tolerance of Muslims lags behind other groups. Our results suggest that communities of religious non-Muslims are a key resource for bridging the Muslim acceptance gap."

Dr John Shaver's work is concerned with understanding how and why religions unite and divide groups of people, the dynamics of religious change in Oceania, and the effects of inequality on decision making and health. He is currently part of the New Zealand Attitudes and Values Study. In addition to New Zealand, he has conducted research in the Czech Republic, Fiji, Mauritius and the United States

Sunday 15th May 2016
St Columba Centre
40 Vermont Street, Ponsonby
2.00 pm - 3.00 pm

Monday 16th May 2016
Otago University
Archway 2 Lecture Theatre
5.15 pm - 6.30 pm

Light refreshments provided.

For queries please contact:
religiousdiversitytrust@gmail.com

Religious Diversity Centre
Aotearoa New Zealand

e-mail: religiousdiversitytrust@gmail.com
Phone 09 521 4367

1/91 St Johns Road, Meadowbank, Auckland 1072