

Te Kete Aronui Division of Humanities 2022-2026

Who we are and what we do

We are a community of creative and diverse critical thinkers who explore how humans interact with one another and the world around them. As scholars, practitioners and performers we engage with the past, imagine the future, and develop people-centred solutions to local, national and global problems. We are committed to Te Tiriti o Waitangi, and to undertaking high-quality and impactful research, transformational teaching, and meaningful service to our communities.

Championing and advancing the humanities

Effectively promote the value of humanities research, teaching and learning to students and society.

Strengthen Divisional cohesion and collaboration as we work towards our shared goals.

Embracing mātauranga Māori and partnership under Te Tiriti o Waitangi

Develop a community that embraces and embeds mātauranga Māori, tikanga Māori and te reo Māori.

Increase the proportion of academic kaimahi Māori in the Division.

Engaging with our responsibilities and opportunities as a Pacific university

Strengthen cultural competence across the Division.

Increase the proportion of Pacific academic staff in the Division.

Growing our reputation for research and impact

Facilitate high-quality and impactful research across the Division.

Increase the number and value of external research funding grants across the Division.

Inspiring and equipping our students

Provide high-quality academic experiences that reflect student demand, workforce and community needs, and the University's strategic priorities.

Pursue targeted enrolment growth that is financially sustainable for the Division and University.