The extent and nature of children's real-time exposure to alcohol marketing

Tim Chambers, Department of Public Health, University of Otago, Wellington

Our children are being exposed to alcohol marketing and are vulnerable to its persuasive effects. This seminar presents results from innovative research with children using wearable cameras and GPS devices to capture the extent and nature of their exposure to alcohol marketing, and considers what to do about it.

Tim recently completed his doctoral thesis in the Health Promotion and Policy Research Unit at the University of Otago, Wellington. He is interested in policy approaches to prevent and reduce the burden of alcohol-related harm. Tim has degrees in Physical Education and Classical Studies and has experience using visual research methods and conducting research with children.
