Department of Public Health

University of Otago, Wellington | 23A Mein Street | Newtown | Wellington

100 years ago this month: Public health reflections on the influenza pandemic and World War One

Nick Wilson, Department of Public Health, University of Otago, Wellington

Both the war and the pandemic, which occurred a hundred years ago, had massive health impacts for New Zealanders. Come and learn about University of Otago Wellington epidemiological research on these topics – and what the remaining research gaps are.

Nick Wilson presents this seminar on behalf of his co-authors Jennifer Summers, George Thomson and Michael Baker. Nick is a professor of public health whose research covers a broad range of interests including epidemiological modelling and health economics, tobacco, infectious diseases, and climate change.

Friday 16 November 2018 12.30 to 1.15
