

2020 PUBLIC HEALTH SUMMER SCHOOL

FREE OPEN TALKS

All Welcome

WELLINGTON

Improving the mental health of the population. Is treatment working?

Efforts to improve the mental health of populations has focused on getting more people into treatment. However, large increases in the provision of treatments has not produced detectable improvement. The talk will discuss the possible reasons for this and suggest that more attention be paid to the 'quality gap' and the 'prevention gap'.

Monday 10 February, 5:15pm

University of Otago, Wellington | 23A Mein Street | Newtown | Wellington

This event includes the official opening of the 2020 Public Health Summer School

For more information: otago.ac.nz/uowevents

Professor Anthony Jorm

University of Melbourne, Australia

Anthony Jorm is a Professor Emeritus in the Centre for Mental Health, University of Melbourne. His research focuses on building the community's capacity for prevention and early intervention with mental disorders.

